

- (1) Marilaine was one of 200,000 or more Haitian children called restaveks, typically serving as unpaid maids in strangers' homes, working for room and board. It is a vast system of child trafficking that is often characterized as a modern form of slavery.
- (2) Marilaine grew up in a remote village where no family planning or public schooling is available, one of 12 children to impoverished parents who later separated. As Marilaine tells the story, one day when she was 10 years old, she walked to her father's house to ask him to help pay her school fees. Instead, he dispatched her here to the capital to work as a restavek, a Creole term used to describe child labourers, without even telling her mother.
- (3) As is common for restaveks, Marilaine slept on the floor and woke up at 5 each morning to clean the house, fetch water and wash dishes. She says she was beaten daily with electrical cords. Marilaine was allowed no contact with her family. Once, she says, she tried to run away but was caught and beaten.
- (4) An aid group called the Restavek Freedom Foundation helped Marilaine escape her home and find refuge in a safe house for restaveks. The mood was festive in the beautiful home as the dozen girls living there cheered Marilaine's arrival and hugged her. Marilaine picked up a book, telling me that she wasn't allowed to touch books at her old house. She tried on new clothes. She slept in a bed.
- (5) One way to fight such human trafficking would be to provide free and accessible birth control, so that women like Marilaine's mother don't end up with 12 children that they struggle to feed. Another would be to provide free public education, so that parents don't feel that the only way to get schooling for their children is to send them off as restaveks.

Parents play a crucial role in their child's social development. A child is not born with social skills. He needs parents who take an active role in (preparing / preparation / prepared) him to interact successfully with his peers. The most important thing parents can do (on / for / by) their child is to develop a loving, accepting, and respectful relationship with (he / his / him). This warm relationship sets the stage for all future relationships, including friendships. It helps the child (developing / develop / developed) the basic trust and self-confidence necessary to go out and meet others. It provides a firm foundation on (where / when / which) the child can develop social skills. Parents also teach their child various social skills by being a (well / good / best) role model. That is, a child learns from how his parents interact with him and other people. (Furthermore / Though / Despite) he learns how to meet people and talk to them, to tell stories and jokes, and to cooperate with others and ask for favors. He learns to accept compliments (graciously / graceful / grace) and to show admiration and appreciation.
